Some parents pull kids from school:

Violence rumor at River City HS

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A "couple of hundred" students were pulled out of River City High School classes by their parents on Friday over fears that their school might experience gang-related violence. The violence didn't materialize.

"There was a phone call from a concerned parent on Monday, October 2nd," said Stuart McKay, principal of the 1600-students school. That call said that "some people from South Sacramento" were going to do a "drive-by" shooting at RCHS, he stated.

"On Thursday, I had another phone call from a concerned parent who wouldn't give a name and again, nothing (to substantiate). The anonymous parent said she knew of someone (a student who planned to bring a weapon to campus) but she wouldn't give the person's name."

Again, the school talked to local police, and neither could come up with any information to substantiate a threat of violence. But after talking with school district superintendent Steven Lawrence, said McKay, the school sent out an "auto-dial" telephone recording to parents of RCHS students, informing them of the threat.

"It just said that we've received these concerns from parents about a drive-by shooting, but in contact with law enforcement, we had nothing to substantiate it."

The recording didn't encourage parents to pull their kids out of school on Friday, the principal added. But some parents never received the automatic phone call – leaving some of them to hear about the matter second-hand, possibly fueling a small panic. The "autodial" system's failure was apparently due to a faulty phone line, and the problem has been fixed, said McKay.

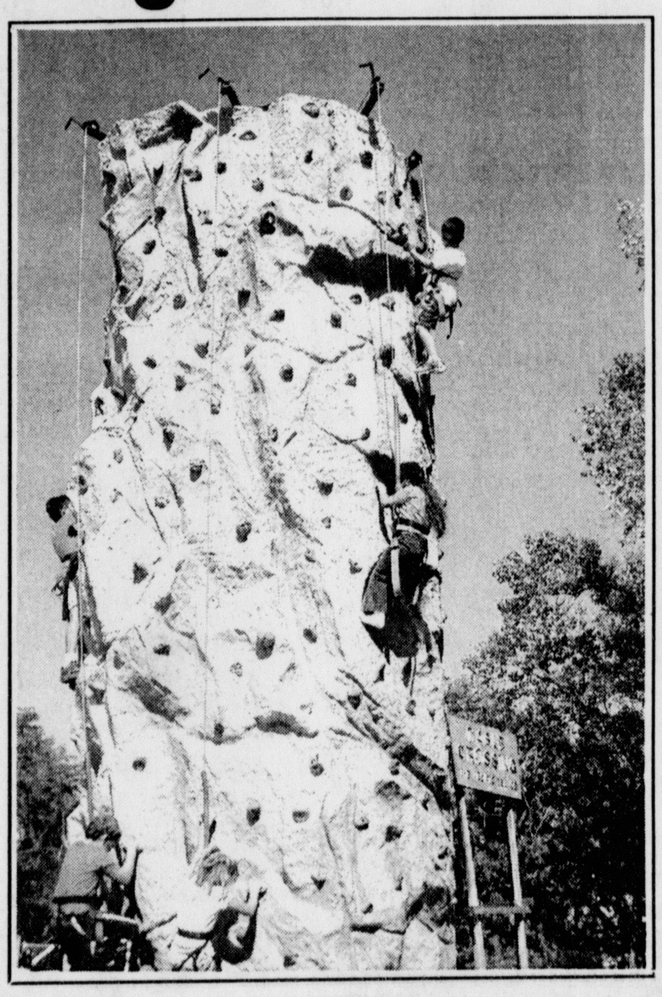
"So what we ended up with was a panic at the school," he explained. "It took place all of Friday. I was in classes, and teachers were taking care of business, and students were learning."

But still, parents kept arriving to pull kids out of school.

"I saw a couple of parents come to school to pick up their kids, and the kids said, 'no, I want to stay, I'm learning here.'"

Meanwhile, local police maintained a presence at the school. And nothing violent happened.

Neighbors Fair



Kids attending Saturday's 'Neighbors Fair' at River Walk Park climbed a temporary mountain "because it was there."

Other attractions at the fair were musicians Jackie Green and Chris Webster, along with food, entertainment, a jump-house, and a lot of other goodies. The fair followed the annual "Community Day Parade" along West Capitol."

Crowds were good & the weather was great.

School bandmembers march in Saturday's Community Day Parade

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

This year's West Sacramento Community Day Parade, which was held this past Saturday, featured the combined musical talents of band students from every school in the Washington Unified School District.

"The parade theme this year was `Celebrating Kids'," explained Delores Henson, who teaches instrumental music to two hundred 4th, 5th, and 6th graders in West Sacramento, "so the music teachers decided to make one large band from all the music students in the district to celebrate kids through .u-sic."

Not only did Henson and her fellow music teachers want to

Activist Langford seeks board seat

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's Dani Langford has become a familiar sight and a familiar voice at the podium in front of the local school board. Now she'd like a chance to be on the other side of the podium: Langford is running for one of two open seats on the Washington Unified School District's board of trustees.

"We've always been active in the schools," said Langford, a married 42-year old parent and businessperson. "At Westmore Oaks Elementary (as a school parent), I spent a minimum of three days a week on campus. We still occasionally go back and do volunteer work."

That includes bringing some of the family's goats to the school "so the kindergartners and first-graders can touch and feel farm animals."

Langford has also been an officer in the school's PTA, has been a 4-H leader, and been active in the booster club at River City High School. She was active in the "Save Our City" campaign to challenge the city's policy on growth, and has done charity work for "World Vision" and other projects.

But she is probably most familiar to West Sacramentans as one of the voice of protest during the past year as the local school board transferred former River City High principal Mort Geivett (also a school board candidate now) away from his post.

DANI LANGFORD

"Before that, there have been different issues where I felt the need to attend board meetings," she recalls. "But in the last two years, I've been really focusing on the issues, because there's so much controversy, so much mishandling of funds, so many (open meeting law) violations that I was aware of."

"When the rumbling started about what was being done to Mort and Scott (Seffens, the school's athletic director, who was also targeted for discipline), I started attending every board meeting. Their rights were being violated."

Langford became one of the most prominent critics of the board during that saga. Now she hopes to take a seat on the board, where she promises to listen better to activists like herself.

"They need to listen to the parents – not just roll their eyes and talk among themselves," Langford stated. "They have to listen and be responsive."

Langford believes the district is financially healthy "on paper,"

"But I'm concerned that we're borrowing Peter to pay Paul, and I'm concerned we're going to get into trouble. One big thing is accountability – we have so much disruption with all the leadership changes last year. Money was being spent without anyone paying attention. We have to be more frugal."

Langford is concerned that "some of the teachers don't have enough paper to make copies for students, and we, the parents, are either supplying paper or being charged to make

Not too late to vote

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Kryss Rankin, West Sacramento's city clerk, says there's still time.

"The last day to register to vote in the November 7 election is October 23," Rankin told the News-Ledger. "Even if people are 'on the fence' about whether they will vote, they should register. At least this will leave them the option."

The city clerk added that it is now easier than ever to vote – even if you don't want to visit a local polling place on Tuesday, Nov. 7, to do it.

"You don't have to go to the polls. You can request an absentee ballot. Or you can register as a permanent absentee, and never have to go to the polls. Also, we will have 'early voting' available from October 30 to November 3, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the senior center, 664 Cummins Way."

Rankin added that West Sacramento typically has the lowest voter turnout of Yolo County compared to the county's other cities and its unincorporated area. And despite a housing boom, she said, the number of eligible voters who are actually registered to vote in West Sacramento has managed to decline locally in the past two years.

In November of 2004, she said, the city had 18,666 adults registered to vote. Now, there are only 17,799 registered. Those figures are for a city of 40,000 people that has been growing for several years.

On the upcoming ballot, though, are a bevy of local issues – two city council seats, two school board seats, the mayor's post and the question of whether to get a new electricity provider for the region. That should make for higher-than-usual turnout, said Rankin.

"The last time we had a city council election, we had 67 percent of the voters turn out, which for us was a high. Our lowest turnout was 27 percent, in 1993."

Figures for voter turnout only consider the percentage of registered voters who cast ballots. They don't include people who are eligible but never registered.

So how do you register to vote, if you're new to the process, or new to the city?

"You fill out a voter registration card and send it to the Yolo County elections department," said Rankin. You can get a registration card from the city clerk's office at 1110 West Capitol Avenue, and her office will even send it in to the county for you if you fill it out a few days ahead of the Oct. 23 deadline.

You could also start the registration process online at the California secretary of state's website: www.ss.ca.gov.

Questions? Call Kryss Rankin at 617-4500.

EARLY DEADLINE, plus policies

The News-Ledger will be printing next week's issue (October 18) a day early, and all submissions for it must be received by this Friday. This includes classified ads, which are normally acceptable on a later deadline. Thank you for your cooperation.

The News-Ledger will bring back its usual campaign-season policies this year.

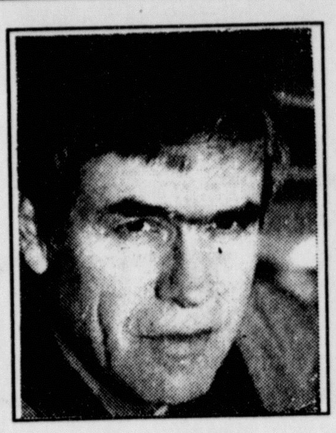
No negative campaigning will be permitted in the final edition before the November 7 ballot, which will be published on Nov. 1. The reason is that anyone criticized in the newspaper that week will not have a fair opportunity to respond before the voting occurs. The policy applies to both paid advertising and to "letters to the editor."

A wider range of opinion is permitted in ads and letters through Oct. 25, within the usual guidelines.

Also, please keep in mind that political advertising must be paid for in advance and page position requests will be honored – as far as practical – in the order in which ad payments are received.

Please call 371-8030 with any questions.

Survey: most women prefer pets to husbands



My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

As many of you know who read this column from time to time, I try to leave no stone unturned in my ongoing search to make better sense of the male-female relationship, especially those relationships which sooner or later end up in marriage.

On one side of the ledger, I have written at great length about how the institution of marriage helps many people of both sexes live longer and happier lives, and that it usually leads to having children, which no one should miss in terms of the unconditional love and fun and games of that experience. On the other hand, I have also used this space to recall such things as an old high school friend who is so blase about her married sex-life that she mentally puts together her Sunday morning grocery shopping list on Saturday nights while she is having her once-a-week get-together with her husband. And I have even gone as far as quoting the great French/Algerian thinker Albert Camus who once wrote: "It is yet to choose the most aesthetic suicide; marriage and the 40-hour week, or a revolver."

Anyway, knowing that the subject of marital bliss interests me, a loyal News-Ledger subscriber has just informed me that a little free monthly newspaper calling itself the Pet Gazette recently ran the results of an online poll which discovered that the vast majority of women now prefer having a pet to a husband.

"You've got to be kidding me?" I asked the loyal subscriber, who I will call Beth.

"I'm serious," said Beth. "They did an online poll of almost 14,000 women over a seven day period and an overwhelming 78 percent of them said they would much rather have a furry little companion than a husband."

"Now what kind of organization would run a poll like that?" I asked with interest.

"It was done by DogCatRadio.com.," came the answer matter-of-factly.

"And just what in the world is that?"

"You've never heard of DogCatRadio?"

"Of course not. The last time I checked, dogs and cats can't communicate through the spoken word, so why would they have a radio program?"

Obviously upset that I was clueless to the fact that dogs and cats are apparently in desperate need of their own radio show, Beth suggested that I spend a little time researching DogCatRadio before we continued our conversation, which I of course did.

It turns out that about a year ago a California (of course) pet lover founded an internet radio station "designed to ease the lives of lonely dogs, cats and humans around the world" and called it DogCatRadio. Believe it or else, it now has 6.2 million listeners who tune it in every week and here are just a few of the quotes I found praising its creation:

"When one tunes in to DogCatRadio, mellow music makes ears perk up all over the house." San Antonio Express-News

"A new radio station for pets and their humans has the world wagging its tail." CNN

"In short, DogCatRadio is good radio and music with few interruptions and there is no one imploring you to get your windshield replaced." The Arizona Republic

"Curl up in front of your computer with your favorite furry friend and see what all the barking and meowing is all about!" kidsnewsroom.org

"It wouldn't surprise me if DogCatRadio is the hottest thing to hit the critter-loving community since plastic newspaper bags. The wonder is that no one thought of it sooner." Rocky Mountain News

"Okay," I said to Beth after I had listened to an hour or so of DogCatRadio and gotten back to her, "I will admit that it's a pretty cute idea, but I didn't hear anyone say anything about that poll you mentioned about women now preferring pets to men."

"Do you really doubt the results?" she asked me.

"Of course I do! You can't tell me that 78 percent of married women would rather have a dog than a husband."

"The poll didn't say it had to be a dog," Beth quickly corrected me. "It could be a cat or a parrot or whatever. It could be any pet."

"But that's even worse!"

"Why?"

"Because I can see how a person could get really attached to a dog. I mean, I've done that myself."

"Well," further explained Beth, "maybe someday they'll do a poll just about dogs, but I don't think that would work."

"Why not?"

"Because there are all different kinds of dogs. For instance, I like Dachshunds, but I know lots of women who prefer bigger dogs, like labs and retrievers."

"Wait a second -- you like wiener dogs?"

"I love them. And by the way, they are called Dachshunds, not wiener dogs!"

"But they're not exactly good looking dogs, now are they?" I asked like a fool.

"Of course they are -- they're beautiful!"

"But how can you say that?" I asked, never of course knowing when to stop. "They have those really short legs and long bellies that almost scrape the ground. And they also have those long ugly snouts that..."

"Hey," suddenly shouted Beth over the phone, "don't you be talking trash about Dachshunds!", making me realize for the first time that 78 percent just might be about the right number after all.

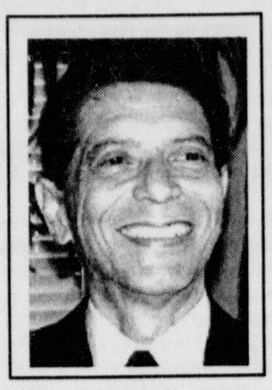
SPORTS INSIDER

By Rich Novoa



By Richard Novoa

The American League Championship series is set to begin play on Tuesday in Oakland with the A's hosting the Detroit Tigers but what's really interesting is the fact that the A's roster will include 13 former River Cats players. Just think about all these fine young ball players who played their hearts out and entertained us during the past few years at Raley Field in West Sacramento.

The talented ex-River Cats include 2003 PCL Pitcher of the Year Justin Duchscherer, 2004 PCL MVP Dan Johnson, 2005 American League Rookie of the Year Huston Street and 2002 American League Cy Young Award winner Barry Zito. Also, don't forget about Nick Swisher, Joe Blanton, Rich Harden and Adam Melhuse.

The newest Gato added to the A's roster is infielder Mark Kiger. Kiger, who has never played in the major league, got the call to the big leagues to fill in for the injured Mark Ellis who broke his finger during the playoffs.

If your going to have your first cup of coffee in the major leagues, it might as well be in the playoffs or maybe even in the World Series. All these guys were part of the River Cats back-to-back PCL Championships (2003/04).

Major League Playoffs

The playoffs had a few upsets in the first round with the Padres and Dodgers going down easy but who can explain what happened to the New York Yankees. The Detroit Tigers lost their first game in New York and then proceeded to whip the mighty Yankees in three straight games!

The road to the World Series for the American League teams will start in Oakland with the Tigers and A's squaring off in the best of seven series starting on Tuesday (5 p.m.-FOX) and Game 2 scheduled for Wednesday before the series shifts to Detroit on Friday, Oct 13th. If the A's pitching holds up they should hang on to beat the lucky wild card Tigers in seven games.

In the National League, the Championship series will start in New York with Game 1 on Wednesday and Game 2 on Thursday (5 p.m.-FOX) and then series moves to St. Louis for Game 3 on Saturday (1 p.m.). The World Series is destine to be in the Big Apple so the Mets should win in six games.

Kings Korner

While the Kings are in their training camp preparing for their preseason opener on Oct. 12th in Dallas the L.A. Clippers and Philadelphia 76ers are in Europe getting whipped by European teams. The Sixers lost to F.C. Barcelona 104-99 and yes, Iverson and Webber played and CSKA Moscow clipped Los Angeles.

These teams are two of the four NBA teams participating in the European tour and are the first to play in Russia since the Atlanta Hawks in 1988. CSKA, the Euro league champions, put a good licking on the Clippers beating them 94-75.

The Kings will travel to Las Vegas next week to play the Los Angeles Lakers on Oct. 17th before they return home for their first preseason game at the Arco on Friday night Oct. 20th against the Utah Jazz.

NFL Week 6

The 49ers (2-3) won the "Battle of the Bay" against the Oakland Raiders but it wasn't much of a battle. The Niners played a great second half and ended up scoring 34 points against the hapless Raiders defense after trailing the Silver and Black 13-7 at halftime.

Alex Smith enjoyed another fine game behind center leading the 49ers with three touchdown tosses and showed great poise and leadership directing the Niners young offense. The Niners defense was lead by another great performance by cornerback Walt Harris who hauled in three interceptions and neutralized Randy Moss all day. I think that was Randy Moss out their wearing No. 18?

On the other side of the ball the Raiders (0-4) played like they were sleeping walking and never really showed any emotion during the contest. Now the Raiders will hit the road on Sunday night (5:30 p.m.) to play in the Mile High city against the Broncos. The winless Raiders will be big underdogs (-10 ½) against their archrivals. Maybe QB, Aaron Brooks, will be activated in time to pull the Raiders out of the Black Hole.

Aztec's Picks

The Dawg (10-10-1) hit the "College Lick of the Week" again with the Texas Longhorns and in the NFL, the N.Y. Giants whipped the Redskins and Denver won on Monday night but Aztec had a push with the Panthers (-8) spread to finish the week with 3 wins and 1 tie.

Aztec really likes his cousins the Georgia Bulldogs (-13) as the "College Lick of the Week" and in the NFL the Dawg is going with the Lions (-1), Tigers (Bengals -6) and Da Bears (-10, Monday night).

Enjoy your day – see ya next week!

And she said "we cannot afford the (new high school) campus we're building. We all want the very best campus we can give the students, but we can't bankrupt the district (to do it)."

She's critical of part of the facilities plan which calls for the district to help finance new campuses through "certificates of participation," in which the district takes out a secured loan.

"I don't think it's a good idea – we need to remember we have other schools that need to be built, not just the new high school, and we can't put all our eggs into the new high school."

And she doesn't feel the city will support another school bond to add to the one they approved for the high school in 2004.

"I think this community is so angry about the way this money was spent, and that we have nothing to show for it, that I don't think we could pass a $5 bond in this community," Langford lamented.

What does she see as her job as a school board member?

"The primary job is to make policies and set the vision for the district," she said. "I think we see a lot of micromanaging. I understand there are times you have to get in and do that, but we've seen too much. And policies and bylaws are constantly being violated."

Are student test scores important?

"Test scores are important," Langford answered, but my concern is there's so much emphasis on those that, I wonder whether we're teaching them to take the test or teaching the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic. To me, it's kind of a double-edged sword."

"The schools that do well on test scores have really high parental involvement, and I think that's the key to success. Those students are being watched to do their homework and the parents know what's going on at the school."

How about the proposal to create some "K-8" campuses, adding seventh and eighth grades to some elementary schools?

"I haven't really had time to study it. I think it's good to give parents options, but I am not for making an elementary school a K-8 if it is going to bring 1,000 students to the campus. . . I think that's too large for a campus with elementary schools."

How hard will Langford campaign?

"It's important that people understand I'm not a politician," she said. "I'm a parent. I don't have a plethora of money to spend on a campaign, but I have a passion and dedication for the kids."

showcase their students' performance skills during the parade, they also hoped that such a large gathering of young musicians would encourage parents and children throughout West Sacramento to get more involved with the music programs available at our local public schools.

"Studies show that learning music and learning how to play an instrument also helps students learn to read and understand math better," said Henson, who teaches at Alyce Norman, Elkhorn, Bryte and Bridgeway Island elementary schools. "Plus music also brings students and parents closer together because parents usually are very good about attending their children's band concerts and supervising the practicing of instruments at home."

Kurt Pearsall, who teaches music to about 220 students at Westfield, Evergreen, Westmore Oaks, and Southport elementary schools said, "My students are pulled out of regular education classes twice a week for 30 minutes of instruction and studies have shown this to have a therapeutic effect on most students. They are matched with an instrument and a band method book and study instruments like flute, clarinet, trumpet, trombone, alto saxophone, tenor saxophone, electric bass, and drums. Of all the research studies showing music students as better students, the one I find most interesting is that college graduates who are most likely to be admitted to medical school were music students. We all want doctors who will listen to us, and music training reinforces and teaches this skill."

This year Pearsall is especially pleased to have received a $5000 grant from the West Sacramento Education Foundation to purchase new band instruments.

"I was able to purchase 12 brand new clarinets and this should provide upwards of 240 students an opportunity to study music on quality band instruments for almost 20 years," said Pearsall.

Cory Cunningham is the Band Director at Golden State Middle School and he said, "Many of the music students in my classroom come to school everyday having faced a great variety of personal challenges in their lives. The idea that they can come to school and participate in music everyday, doing something that they really enjoy, in a safe but challenging musical environment, is the thing that gets me out of bed every morning."

Once local students who are interested in music finish elementary school and graduate from Golden State Middle School they have even more exciting days ahead of them when they reach River City High School.

"Our music department has numerous options for students interested in music," said Felicia Alleger, who is the Music Director at RCHS. "We have two full choirs and 40 piano students in addition to our Symphonic Band and Traditional Jazz Band. Our Advanced Vocal Ensemble is auditioning to perform as part of Disneyland's Annual Candle Light Procession, and Jazz Band is auditioning for its tenth straight year of performing at the Sacramento Jazz Jubilee. And several of our alumni have gone on to have careers in music as performers, managers and composers."

"I was very impressed by the number of music students who participated in the Community Day Parade this year," said Henson. "They really enjoyed playing 'When the Saints Go Marching In' with each other and many of the parents were impressed with the performance. In fact, the music teachers are considering making it an annual event."

"It's all about having fun," said Pearsall, who has taught in West Sacramento for over 20 years. "I figure I have had well over 3,000 students in my bands and I hope to continue performing music long into my retirement, and if I am lucky, performing along side students I have taught."

"We want everyone to know that the music teachers in our school district really love our jobs," added Henson, "and we would love to see more children exposed to music, so any interested student or parent should just ask to talk to the music teacher on their campus. Music has enriched our lives and as music teachers we love having the opportunity to pass that joy on to our students."

Sacramento River water has been showing an undue amount of sediment during th past few days. This is due to the fact that water is being pumped from the Natomas district at the Second Bannon slough. PLUMBERS GETTING BACK AT THEIR ARCH ENEMY

In response to the attacks of the Sacramento Bee the Master Plumbers Association is distributing the following card to its friends in Sacramento:

Mr. Business Man:

How do you expect people to come to Sacramento to trade, when one class after another are continually being unjustly accused of profiteering by the press? The plumbers are accustomed to it. But is it a benefit to the city, and is that what you should receive for thousands of dollars spent in advertising.

Master Plumbers' Association.

SELECTION OF VIRDEN PACKING PLANT AND STOCK YARDS TO BE MADE BY NOVEMBER 15

ALL INDICATIONS POINT TO THE FACT THAT THE PLANT WILL BE LOCATED IN WEST SACRAMENTO AT ORIGINAL PROPOSED LOCATION

The Independent is somewhat proud of the fact that Yolo County capital has become actively interested in the Virden Packing Plant and Stock Yards and believes that it is partly responsible for the increased interest lately taken in the project by Yolo County capitalists.

The latest and most substantial addition to stock buyers in the packing plant is Mr. M. T. Emmert of Dunnigan, who purchased last week the maximum of stock allowed an individual, namely, $25,000.

Emmert has been placed on the Advisory Board of the corporation and naturally will have something to say when a location for the plant is to be selected.

No doubt, too, his influence with other capitalists of Yolo County will spur them to greater action in contributing towards the success of the plant and locating it within the county confines.

In promoting the Virden plant The Independent must acknowledge a selfishness in endeavoring to secure for Yolo County a plant that means so much in the future.

Thousands of men will be employed and a constant demand for all products of the soil will continue.

A constant market will be at the disposal of producers of the county and in close proximity to them.

This means much for the farmers in West Sacramento and all through the county.

Again, sight must not be lost of the fact that hundreds of homes must be built to accommodate the workingmen in the plant. It will be only natural for them to get as close to their work as possible and since sites are available for home building near the plant, there will be a little city or rather a large city in the immediate neighborhood of the plant.

Contributions for stock in the Virden Packing Company have been coming from the northern counties of the State very fast.

Lessen, Modoc, Siskiyou and Humboldt counties have largely contributed and stock raisers in the State of Nevada have been taking great interest and contributing much to the success of the proposal.

Cattle raisers in the vicinity of Lovelock, who in the past have been forced to pay enormous rates for transportation to the eastern markets, see salvation for themselves in the Virden Packing Company.

Reno capital has been contributing in great sums and even as far east as the State of Idaho subscriptions have been made voluntarily by stock raisers in the concern.

By November 15th the requisite amount of $2,000,000 of stock will be sold and relief will be taken by the concern from the Commissioner of Corporations.

It is only natural to infer that as soon as the plant is started and plans of the building are published, that contributions will come faster.

The total capitalization is $5,000,000 but as soon as $2,000,000 is subscribed, the buildings will be started.

The Supervisors of Yolo County are doing all that lays in their power to secure the plant for West Sacramento and are prompting the well known capitalists of Woodland to invest so that the resources of the county may be improved and that an added population be brought to this section so as to improve valuations and assessments.

From appearances presented at the present writing, there is no doubt but that the plant will be located in West Sacramento.

ANOTHER ADDITION TO LEONARD FAMILY

On September 27th a new arrival made its apearance in the family of Pat Leonard in the shape of a pretty little girl.

This is the fourth child in the family and Pat celebrated as usual.

Pat Leonard is a clothing salesman with the Heeseman store and is popular with scores of Sacramento young men who never forget him when a new suit is needed.

He is extremely proud of his late accomplishment and points with pride to his Rooseveltian prowess.

One State flower should be called the California Poppy always, and never the "Eschscholtzia," its real botanical name, which cannot be pronounced but has to be sneezed.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Bits & pieces

That smoky pall that settled over West Sacramento Monday afternoon was from neither an accidental brush fire nor a farmer somewhere burning off some rice stubble. It came from a training exercise involving the city fire department near the California Highway Patrol Academy at the city's north end.

The usual southwesterly wind apparently failed to show up and steer the smoke clear of the city.

One local candidate for city council has proposed that "districting" be adopted for future elections. He pointed out, correctly, that nobody from north of the barge canal (geographically, the northern half of the city) had entered the race for a council seat this year.

There are some good reasons for and against creating districts for city council members. The main "good" reason is to ensure that it's not just Southport residents running the city.

But the real problem here – if there is a problem – is that people from the north-area are not running in the first place. If qualified people from the north area (which includes some of the city's lower income areas) are consistently running for council but unable to win, then "districting" may be worth a serious look.

Speaking of the lower income areas in the city's far north: to every rule there is at least one exception, and the most obvious exception to this stereotype of Bryte and Broderick is "The Rivers" subdivision built by the Grupe Company.

The homes are designed to impress, and they certainly do. They're nestled in a neighborhood near the riverfront that is fenced and gated at night.

One reporter visiting The Rivers was struck, though, by a real architectural eyebrow-raiser: the streets in the development are too wide and too straight, with little landscaping along the sidewalk area. All this seemed to create an invitation to drive fast, and to drive everywhere instead of walk. Narrower, closed-in streets would be more appropriate. No doubt the builders inherited the street plan from the subdivision's earlier, unsuccessful developers.

Letters to the Editor

Vote for Johannessen

This letter is an endorsement for Mark Johannessen, who is running for one of the open seats for West Sacramento City Council.

In 2003 Mr. Johannessen handled a difficult and complicated legal matter for me, going far beyond usual efforts to ensure that I had the best representation possible. I know from this experience that he has an intelligent and thoughtful approach to problems and that follows through well.

Mr. Johannessen would make an excellent city council member.

"The Black Dahlia"

Running time: 119 minutes
MPAA rating: R

On the morning of Jan. 15, 1947, a woman walking by an empty lot discovers the mutilated corpse of wannabe actress Elizabeth Short. The 22-year-old victim had rich black hair and always wore black clothing along with a black flower in her hair, earning her the nickname The Black Dahlia.

The murder of The Black Dahlia is one of the most sensational unsolved murders in Los Angeles history. It has been the subject of countless books, a '70s TV movie starring Lucy Arnaz, and now a noir thriller by director Brian De Palma.

As noir goes, De Palma is no Raymond Chandler. "The Black Dahlia" is no "Big Sleep" — more like The Big Snooze. Boring doesn't even begin to describe how painfully tedious this movie is.

The problem isn't De Palma's cinematic vision. The film is beautifully photographed and the shots showcase the director's audacious vibe. No, the problem lies primarily with the casting.

The stars of "The Black Dahlia," Josh Hartnett, Aaron Eckhart (as the two detectives assigned to the case) and Scarlett Johansson (their roommate) are so lifeless onscreen, they make zombies look like Tickle-Me Elmo. Eckhart attempts to break out of the mumblefest from time to time, but his idea of intense acting is to just shout a lot.

Another problem is the script. As the detectives investigate the murder, they are drawn deeper and deeper into LA's kinky underworld, and for too much of the film, "The Black Dahlia" looks like a pale imitation of "L.A. Confidential."

I can't recommend this film, as much of a De Palma fan as I am. If you're curious, check it out when it comes out on video. It's not worth paying to see at the theater.

The Weather Makers: How Man Is Changing the Climate and What It Means for Life on Earth
by Tim Flannery
(Atlantic Monthly Press, $24)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

World-renowned scientist Tim Flannery makes a convincing argument that we are approaching a global tipping point and that unless we take immediate corrective steps, our very future on this planet may be in doubt.

Flannery believes we will reach a point — possibly sometime this century — when human influence on the climate will overwhelm all other natural factors. Put another way, by our very habits we have become weather makers.

The rate of global warming is 30 times faster than at the end of the last Ice Age, a period that constitutes the fastest rise in temperature in recent Earth history. His new book is a manual on the use of the Earth's thermostat and details what we must do if we are to counteract the greenhouse effect. He tackles this complex subject with clarity, combining historical fact, scientific data and his personal observations.

The very fate of our planet could depend on what corrective steps we take, as a world community, during the next few critical decades.

Richard Karn

Q. I would like to purchase a copy of the movie "Hit the Deck." It was a popular movie in the 1950s. My brother (now deceased) was in the Navy at that time, and his group was filmed marching at the beginning of the movie. It would mean so much to have this. Can you help me? —Betty L., Greenville, S.C.

A. The star-studded musical "Hit the Deck" was released in the waning days of Hollywood's "Golden Age," and was able to attract such stars as Jane Powell, Ann Miller, Tony Martin, Debbie Reynolds, Vic Damone and Richard Anderson. The movie is available on VHS, but it has not yet been digitally remastered for DVD. I was able to find a few dozen copies on Amazon.com as well as a few on the eBay auction Web site.

Q. I noticed "Family Feud" has a new host, John O'Hurley. Where is Richard Karn? What is he doing now? — Mary Jane A., Eau Claire, Wis.

A: Richard Karn, best known to fans as Al Borland of "Home Improvement" fame, hosted the popular game show from 2002-2006. Karn currently can be seen in infomercials for Little Giant Ladder Systems, and next year you can catch him in the movie "Mr. Blue Sky."

A nine-time Emmy winner, Roker also hosts a variety of NBC specials, including the Macy's Thanksgiving Day and Rose Bowl parades. He's a best-selling author with four acclaimed books to his credit, and is admired worldwide for his work with a host of charitable efforts. He's also CEO of Al Roker Entertainment, which produces dozens of special TV projects every year for networks all over the dial.

Of all the food segments on "Today," does one stand out as a favorite, or one that maybe went wrong in an amusing way?

"One day on a Monday, we had a recipe that called for a swap out of the dish we were preparing with a finished version. While we were live on the air, I went to get the dish out of the oven. It turned out the stagehands had wheeled out the oven from the "Weekend Today" show. To make matters worse, they had not removed the dish that had been prepared two days before! Needless to say, it was not what we wanted to show the audience. But I did anyway. It got a big laugh."

Fans know you as a host of huge parades. If you could create a parade for your favorite snack, tell us what your float would look like.

"It would be made of Ring Dings, Yankee Doodles and Yodels."

Viewers are always sending you food items, right?

"One of the wildest ever was a giant Al Roker made out of Smarties."

Other than your hometown of New York, what U.S. city would you be happy to live in just because of the food and restaurants?

"Chicago."

What's your favorite activity during the South Beach Wine and Food Festival, and what fellow celebs are you looking forward to seeing?

"The eventual downpour that turns the event into a giant Wet T-Shirt Contest! I can't wait to see everyone."

AL ROKER'S CHILI

- 2 pounds chuck steak cubed in bite-size pieces
- 1 pound hot Italian sausage removed from casings
- 2 large onions, diced
- 12 cloves of garlic, diced
- 1 tablespoon cumin
- 1 tablespoon paprika
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 (32 ounce) can crushed tomatoes
- 1 (16 ounce) can pinto beans
- 1 (16 ounce) can northern beans
- 1 (16 ounce) can dark red kidney beans

Brown the beef and sausage in a large Dutch oven. Remove from the heat and drain off the fat, reserving about two tablespoons to saute the onions and garlic until translucent; about 7-8 minutes. Add the cumin, paprika and chili powder. Add mixture to Dutch oven, followed by the tomatoes. Stir the whole pot, and simmer on the stove for about 90 minutes. Then add the three cans of beans, simmer for another 30 minutes. Serve with dishes of chopped scallions, sour cream and shredded cheddar cheese.

"A nice warm cornbread is perfect with this tasty chili," Al says.

Until a few years ago, some wireless phone customers felt locked into their service plans, knowing that if they switched to a different provider, they would be forced to surrender their wireless phone number. Then the Federal Communications Commission mandated Local Number Portability (LNP) to let customers keep their phone number. Among national service providers, only Verizon Wireless supported this customer-friendly policy and adopted the best practices to make it easy for customers and businesses to switch wireless service providers.
